Call for Travel Award Applications (Due date: October 11, 2021)

Dear colleagues,

We are pleased to applications for the Geochemistry Division's Student Travel Award and Early Career Scientist Travel Award for the Spring 2022 ACS National Meeting to be held March 20–24, 2022 in San Diego, CA. Note that the meeting format is currently scheduled as hybrid (both in-person and virtual) and that the registration rates are not yet set. See below for award descriptions and procedures.

Student Travel Award

- Number of awards: Up to 8 awards based on the quality of the applications.
- Award: (1) The Geochemistry Division will pay for the awardees' registration for the ACS National Meeting at the corresponding ACS member rate. (2) Awardees will be given an extended time allocation (typically 25-30 minutes) for their oral presentations.
- Eligibility: (1) The applicant must be an undergraduate or graduate student. (2) The applicant must have already submitted a regular abstract to MAPS for the meeting (see Application Procedure for details). (3) The applicant must be the presenting author. (4) Only one application per presenting author will be considered.

Early Career Scientist Travel Award

- Number of awards: Up to 2 awards based on the quality of the applications.
- Award: (1) The Geochemistry Division will pay for the awardees' registration for the ACS National Meeting at the corresponding ACS member rate. (2) Awardees will be given an extended time allocation (typically 25-30 minutes) for the oral presentation.
- Eligibility: (1) The applicant must have received their PhD degree within 5 years of the abstract submission deadline (October 11, 2021). (2) The applicant must have already submitted a regular abstract to MAPS for the meeting (see Application Procedure for details). (3) The applicant must be the presenting author. (4) Only one application per presenting author will be considered.

Application Procedures

- Submitting your regular abstract to the ACS Meeting Abstract Programming System (MAPS <http://maps.acs.org>) before the due date (October 11, 2021).
- Submit a separate, extended abstract to the GEOC Program Chair at: afw@udel.edu
- Extended abstracts should not exceed one page (use at least 11-pt font, single-line spacing, and 1-inch margins) and may contain tables and figures (counted toward the page limit). Make sure to (1) include your name, affiliation, abstract title, and abstract number, and (2) indicate whether you are an undergraduate/graduate student (for the Student Travel Award) or your PhD degree date/year (for the Early Career Scientist Travel Award).
- Applications must be received during the abstract submission window (August 9, 2021–October 11, 2021).
